BLIND MAN MAY CONVICT KILLER

Hearing Voice Alone, He Picks Accused From Among Suspects.

Montreal.—The "God-given gift that the blind possess" may prove the undoing of Henri Bertrand, who now awaits trial in the Bordeaux jail, on a charge of murdering his employer, business associate and benefactor, Joseph Beaudry, editor and publisher, who was found dead in his office chair with two bullet wounds in his back.

The shooting took place late in the afternoon in the business premises where Beaudry conducted his prosperous publishing enterprises and where Bertrand was his trusted secretary-treasurer and manager. The crime was not discovered until several mornings later when the body of the murdered publisher was found seated in his chair before his desk, a pen still clutched in the hand stiffened in death.

The police were at sea. The assassin had left no clue behind him. There was no trace of the manner in which he had gained admission to the office. The direction which the bullets had taken lent color to the theory that the murderer had fired through the transom over the door, but this theory had to be discarded as untenable. Beaudry had remained alone in the building on the afternoon he was murdered, telling his secretary that he expected a visitor. He did not say who this person was.

Police Are Stumped.
Every avenue of inquiry followed by the police led to a blank wall. Then a blind man placed in their hands a thread which, they believe, has led them to the secret of the labyrinth. Henri Bertrand, the dead man's manager, had been closely questioned. He denied having returned to the office on the fateful afternoon. He denied that he even possessed a revolver. Was his denial, they ask, prompted by the fact that the only revolver he ever possessed had been bought but a few days earlier from a blind man?

It seemed impossible that the vendor of the revolver could ever identify the man who had entered his store, with few words, had struck a bargain, paid the money and taken away the weapon. But James Mulhollin of 102 Anderson street remembered the transaction, and when the news of the murder was read to him by a neighbor he got in touch with the police.

It was a dramatic moment at police headquarters when the blind man was confronted with the few suspects whom the police had retained for questioning. Mulhollin and Bertrand both betrayed little signs of emotion, but when the latter spoke in answer to a question put by a detective, the blind man started.

"That is the man who bought the revolver," he declared.

Bertrand was arrested, charged with the murder, and in court the pair were again confronted.

"Do you know what size Mr. Bertrand is?" asked the crown prosecutor.

"Not exactly. I know he is a big man. I think he is bigger than I am. I have a pretty good idea of him."

God-Given Gift.
"How do you size him up?"

"In the God-given way the blind have," Mr. Mulhollin replied. "We have a particular way of weighing people. It is a kind of secret among the blind people. It is a gift—our way of knowing people."

Questioned about the interview at detective headquarters when he had picked out Bertrand from among several others present, Mulhollin was asked:

"Did you meet Mr. Bertrand yesterday?"

"Yes, in the presence of detectives."

"How many people were there?"

"I didn't count—four or five, I think."

"Did anybody tell you he was Bertrand?"

"I got up and shook hands with him when he came in."

"Is that the same man who bought the revolver?"

"Absolutely the same man."

Until Mulhollin came forward with his assertion that Bertrand had purchased a revolver, although he denied ever having owned one, the detectives had hunted in vain for a clue that might point to a motive for the murder of Beaudry.

The murdered man had many strange things in his life. He had made two trips to Russia and had been in communication with the Soviet authorities in Moscow. The purposes of these trips he confided to no one. After his return from the first one he had engaged a firm of private detectives to keep him protected from some danger which he did not specify, but he evidently was in fear of some attempt on his life.

The promising looking lead came to nothing, nor could the police discover any among Beaudry's business associates who would have gained by the murder. True, Beaudry had made many enemies. He drove hard bargains and was abrupt, even surly, in his manner toward associates and those with whom he had business dealings. Hundreds of people were questioned, dozens of seeming clues followed up in vain.

No Woman Involved.
The suggestion that a woman had something to do with the crime had to be discarded. Beaudry was happily married, and no intrigue with other women had come to light.

With the arrest of Bertrand, the police set to work to establish a motive, and, when the accused comes to trial evidence will be presented by the crown showing that the former manager had resented the big profits which the publisher was taking out of his business. Bertrand had proposed to certain capitalists that they should help him get control of the business which, as he himself stated, could be made a very profitable affair.

"He told me that if there were no Mr. Beaudry taking large amounts, the business would be excellent," testified Noel E. Lanoix, one of the capitalists who had been approached by Bertrand.

A few days after the discovery of Joseph Beaudry, and before the funeral of the murdered man, Bertrand had again mooted the matter to Mr. Lanoix, according to the witness who appeared at the preliminary hearing of the accused.

"Did he make any suggestion to you as to buying the business?" asked the crown prosecutor.

"Since the murder, he asked me if there was any possibility of my being able to return and aid him."

"When was that?"

"Some days after the murder."

Rely on Blind Man.

At the approaching trial the crown will recall this witness and others in an attempt to prove that Bertrand, in cold blood, assassinated his employer in the hope that, with him out of the way, there would be a possibility of the salaried employee becoming, with the aid of friends, the controlling proprietor of the business. They will attempt to prove that Bertrand made an appointment to meet Beaudry at an hour when he knew all the staff would have left the building.

When Beaudry was sitting at his desk, having turned to work after dismissing peremptorily his visitor, the latter, the crown will allege, had turned as he reached the door of the office and, pulling a revolver from his pocket, had fired two bullets into the body of the publisher from behind. Then the crown will ask the jury to believe that Bertrand calmly closed the office door, left the premises and proceeded to his home to have lunch with his wife and son.

To support their case the prosecution will rely principally upon the identification of Bertrand by the blind storekeeper. The revolver has disappeared and probably is resting at the bottom of the St. Lawrence river. But before the weapon was sold a friend of Mr. Mulhollin tried it out by firing into a fence post in the rear of the blind man's store. From that fence post a bullet has been recovered and it bears certain scratches made by the barrel of the revolver which, the crown's experts will testify, are identical with marks on the bullets recovered from the body of the dead publisher.

First Time in History.

Perhaps for the first time in the history of crime, a case is being built up on the evidence of a blind man.

Upon the decision of the jury rests the life of a man and also the future of a great business. Bertrand, acquitted, might confidently count on the backing necessary to gain for him the control of the publishing house which issues various periodicals and trade papers widely circulated through French Canada and the French Canadian populations in the New England states. The crown will try to prove that the motive behind the murder of Beaudry was the ambition of Bertrand to wrest control away from the man whom he believed was drawing too heavily on the business and thereby endangering its continued success.

Back of the fight are to be seen the figures of two women. One, the widow of Beaudry, childless and burning with desire for revenge on the man who snatched her husband from her. The other is the wife of Bertrand, fighting to defend her husband against the charge against him. She has one son whose future is involved in the case. He is on the verge of manhood. He might embark on a business career as the son of a prosperous man controlling a profitable business. In the alternative, if she loses her fight, her son enters on life branded as the child of a criminal.

His wife believes in Bertrand and so do many of his business associates who have rallied to provide bail for him did the law in Canada permit the enlargement of men charged with capital offenses.

Dog Catcher Is Paid Better Than Mayor

Oklahoma City, Okla.—The task of dog catcher may not be a dignified or appealing one in most states, but Oklahoma City's dog catcher is the city's highest paid employee.

T. J. Terrill, official city dog catcher, last year drew more money from the city than Mayor O. A. Cargill, or any of the city commissioners, and is paid more than any department heads.

During the last 12 months, Terrill collected reward dog tickets to bring his fee to $2,000. From one him on taxes paid directly to the city treasurer amounted to $1,000. He received $1,000 for dogs he destroyed, bringing his total fee for the year to $4,000. Mayor Cargill receives $4,000 annually. Commissioners get $3,000 each.

THE EMPTY MIND

Mahalia hadn't a thought in her head. Not one. At least that was what she said. She was sure she didn't think up anything to write in her composition class, and she was sure she couldn't think what she had learned in school the day before about kings and queens and presidents and other important personages. "I've just got an empty head," she said half aloud as she leaned over the table upon which were her school books, her composition book, her pad and her box of pencils.

"Ha, ha, ha," said a little creature, and there before her stood a funny looking little object who quite closely resembled a pencil and yet she felt sure must be a brownie.

He was dressed in brown and his feet looked like lead and his cap was made of red rubber. Down the front of his brown suit were the words: "Use me when you think."

"But the trouble is, I don't," said Mahalia.

"Well, you can read, at any rate," said the little brownie. "You read the words I have upon my suit."

"Oh, yes," said Mahalia. "I can read."

"You must have thought a little just then," said the brownie, "for you evidently came to the conclusion that there was some trouble about your thinking. And you could not even have decided that without at least a little bit of a thought."

"Well," said Mahalia, "very, very little."

"I don't believe your head can be quite empty," said the brownie. "Would you like me to shake it and find out? I can tell if it feels empty."

"Oh, I don't believe you could do that with my head," said Mahalia, "for my head isn't like a coffee tin."

"Coffee tin?" asked the brownie.

"Yes," said Mahalia, "my mother shakes the coffee tin to see if it is getting empty, and if she should order more coffee."

"I'd go about your head in just the same way," said the brownie. "Shall I try? I won't hurt."

"All right," laughed Mahalia. Then the brownie came and shook her head.

"It's not empty," he said. "If it were even getting close to being empty, I could hear the few last remaining thoughts rattling around. And if it were quite empty it would be so fearfully light."

"In fact, it's quite well filled," said Mahalia.

"I don't see how it's possible," said Mahalia.

"Not only possible but so," said the brownie. "Now let me see, you have to write a composition?"

"Yes, but I can't think of anything to write about. You see it can be about anything, and I just can't think of anything."

"Well," said the brownie, "don't bother to think of anything. Anything is always fearfully, dreadfully annoying. I have trouble with anything myself sometimes."

"Just think of something. Think of your favorite games, your best friends, your favorite season—maybe it's the spring time or the winter or the autumn or the summer, or all four, and if it's one or even all four, you must have your reason."

"Or think of the dog you would like to have and how you would enjoy him and how you would take care of him if you had him."

"Or think of the day your father put up the old automobile tire as a swing and how you felt swinging in such a new kind of swing."

"Just think of something and you'll be all right. For I find that your head isn't empty at all, and I'm really, in my own quiet way, a bit of a student of heads. It has come from my experience in belonging to the pencil family."

"Then you are a pencil?" asked Mahalia.

But the brownie had disappeared and she was picking up a brown pencil with a rubber at the end, and suddenly she was writing, not only of something, but of many things.

MOTOR CARSMME. MILANOFF
GIVES HER SIDE

Storm Center in Marital Troubles of Architect Wright Asks Mercy.

Minneapolis, Minn.—Olga Milanoff, storm center in the hectic marital troubles of Frank Lloyd Wright, famous architect, and his estranged wife, Miriam Noel Wright, has bared the story of her life—revealed her side of the romance which finally landed her in the Hennepin county jail here.

In an interview at the home of a friend here she threw herself on the mercy of the public.

"Please, can you—will you say that I am not a dancer? It is not true—I know nothing of dancing and they called me that because they knew that it reflected a questionable atmosphere about me—the type I was said to be. I belonged to no club. I was an instructor in rhythm and was employed by some of the most reputable musicians in Chicago and New York—no need to mention names.

"It pains me terribly to have to reveal my family connections, for I come from an old and proud line. But I must. My grandfather was General Mallinoff, at the mention of whose name every Montenegrin patriot will today remove his hat.

"My father was Marko Milanoff, for years chief justice of Montenegro. Married at Seventeen.

"The first ten years of my life were spent in my native country and after that I went to Russia to be educated. I grew up there and was married when I had hardly finished school. I was only seventeen then, and knew nothing of life.

"We both tried hard to make a success of our marriage, but we were wholly unsuited. Vladimir Hinzberg, my former husband, is an honest man and a good one, but of late he has been made a fool and now he is sorry.

"Then came the Russian revolution, and in me you see one of those who suffered most.

"At last, in America, came our divorce, and I went ahead with my work and my studies, groping after those things I had begun to see I wanted.

"In Chicago I met Mr. Wright, and we had much in common. He told me many things, answered many questions that had been troubling me. I loved him dearly and he loved me.

"Mrs. Wright was at that time in California, where she had gone after telling him that she intended to divorce him, that she hated him and never intended to return to him.

"So, believing that she meant what she said—I swear that never for a moment did I doubt that she meant it—we went ahead with our lives. Oh, it was wrong, wrong! If only we had waited, but we were utterly confident that he would soon be free.

"Then my baby was coming and I was happy, believing that we would be safely married long before that happened. But what a blow, what a crushing blow, fell when Miriam wired Frank that she had heard about me, that she was coming back to him, and that she would not divorce him.

Worked at Talliesin.

"I want to tell you about my life at Talliesin. She has said that I was being kept in luxury there. I was working, slaving about the house and grounds, doing both a man's and a woman's work because I had made a bargain with Frank that if he would dismiss his old housekeeper and let me take her place, I would ease my conscience by earning the $125 a month he paid her, and would support Svetlana myself. I didn't want her to become a burden on him.

"Never was I lolling in luxury, as she claimed. I cooked and scrubbed, gardened, even painted and put in the screens to the windows. And I was glad to do it.

"Finally Iovanna was born in a Chicago hospital, and Miriam arrived and created a scandal, three days after the baby arrived, on the 5th of December. I was carried on a stretcher out to an ambulance, to go to New York and hide away."

Rattlers Kill Only 12 Per Cent of Victims

San Antonio, Texas.—Most persons who die from rattlesnake bites are scared to death. Maj. R. E. Scott, M. C. told members of the Congress club meeting here, Major Scott, who is in charge of administration of snakebite serum in this section of the country, said the percentage of fatalities from rattler bites is only 12 per cent, but that the low fatality was probably caused by the failure of the reptile to inject a fatal portion of poison each time it strikes.

The only poisonous snakes found in this section of the country are the rattlers, moccasins and copperheads, he said. A few coral snakes are found, which are most dangerous of all, but they are rare. The percentage of deaths from moccasin and copperhead bites is 9 per cent, he said.

Major Scott said the first thing to do when one is bitten by a snake is to bind a tourniquet between the wound and the heart. This should be loosened every 20 minutes to permit the blood to circulate, he said. Then make incisions lengthwise about the wound to permit a free flow of blood and go for a doctor.

PALENTOWN.

Palentown, Nov. 18.—Theodore Penny, who was visiting at Homer Traver's last week, proved that he was an accurate marksman when he brought down a hawk that tried to steal some of Mr. Traver's chickens. The guest was awakened in the early morning by a noise from the hen house and immediately sprang from his bed, secured a gun and went to the scene of the racket to investigate. When he arrived at the chicken yard he beheld the large bird about to seize its prey and fired the gun. The first charge halted the bird, which was secured and taken to a taxidermist, as it is a rare specimen and a valuable trophy.

Mr. and Mrs. Virgil Ranzinger have gone to Maybrook to spend the winter with their daughter.

Mrs. Jerry Keeler is visiting relatives in Kingston.

A number of our farmers have stopped selling milk for the winter. John Traver and wife and sister, Mildred, visited Ellenville last Monday.

Our teacher, Miss Frankford, is rehearsing for a harvest entertainment to be held at the school house on November 21, in the afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Penny of Philadelphia, who have been spending a week with relatives in this place and Ramothville, have returned to Warden, where they expect to spend some time before they return to their home.

Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Penny and Mrs. H. Traver called on Mr. and Ralph Hornebeck at Litchfield last Friday afternoon.

Little Emilie Miller is spending some time with her sister at Hurleyville.

ALLIGERVILLE.

Alligerville, Nov. 18.—The bee on Wednesday, November 17, to repair the road leading in to the Reformed Church, was largely attended. This bee was held under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society and is part of a cooperative plan for the improvement of the community at large. At noon a hot dinner of pot roast of beef, mashed potatoes with gravy, cabbage salad, pickles, jam, rolls, pumpkin and apple pies and coffee were served by the ladies. It was much enjoyed by the workers.

To those who responded so loyally to the call to cooperate in this movement of improvement, the Aid wishes to take this opportunity to extend sincere thanks. They also wish to extend a most cordial invitation to every family in the community to cooperate in this movement of improvement.

Mendelssohn Club At Philadelphia

Local Musical Organization One of Sixty Which Will Form Tremendous Chorus of 2,500 Voices at Sesquicentennial Exposition Next Week.

The Mendelssohn Club of Kingston will be one of sixty leading American musical organizations to be represented in the great concert of the Associated Glee Clubs of America in Philadelphia on Saturday, November 27. This concert, which will be one of the big features of the Sesquicentennial Exposition, will be given in the Sesquicentennial auditorium.

Dr. Daniel Protheroe of Chicago, the distinguished Welsh conductor, will direct the chorus, according to an announcement just made by C. W. Old, president of the Associated Glee Clubs of America.

One of the big problems involved in the presentation of a concert by a chorus of 2,500 voices is that of direction. Because of this fact, an announcement of the appearance of Dr. Protheroe in Philadelphia is considered by musicians as an especially interesting feature of the concert. Dr. Protheroe has been associated with the celebrated organization, the Elstvedoff, among other great choral bodies. This famous Welsh chorus has long enjoyed an international reputation and has furnished a model for similar groups in other countries.

Efficient Previous Efforts.

The most careful study is being given to the arrangement of the chorus for its Sesquicentennial concert, which in magnitude and training will eclipse all other efforts of this organization. The singers will be grouped so that every man will be within full view of the conductor. At the same time, they will be so massed that the voices will blend in the most perfect manner possible. The acoustical properties of the Sesquicentennial auditorium, as demonstrated in other concerts held there, are also being given full consideration in the placing of the singers.

Seven states, the District of Columbia and Canada are represented by delegations in the coming concert. Philadelphia alone is represented by groups from fourteen glee clubs, while New York city will have representation from an equal number. Clubs from other cities in New York and Pennsylvania are to be represented, while Washington, D. C., New Jersey, Maine, Massachusetts, Connecticut and Maryland will furnish delegations. The Harmony Club of Toronto, Ont., Canada, will give the concert an international aspect.

Growth of Organization.

Since its organization in March, 1924, the Associated Glee Clubs movement has spread from Maine to Texas, and from the Atlantic to the Pacific. The first concert, held at Carnegie Hall, was presented by 400 voices. The second, in the Metropolitan Opera House, was by a chorus of 850, and when the third was given this year, the 1,200 voices made it necessary to use the 71st Regiment armory in New York. Now that 2,500 voices are available for the grand concert, there are few auditoriums sufficiently large to accommodate it. The Sesquicentennial auditorium was selected after a careful survey of available places.

Organized primarily for "The extension of fine chorus singing among the men and boys of America for the education, benefit and pleasure of the nation and the advancement of musical art," the Associated Glee Clubs were not originally concerned with public concerts. In fact, the public has been excluded from the private concerts of most of the leading male chorus organizations. The staging of its public concerts, in which many clubs participate, has created so much national interest in the glee club movement, however, that these public appearances have created keen competition among groups all over the country.

An interesting feature of the Philadelphia concert will be the recording of the various numbers for talking machine records, while the audience is listening to the singers. The recording microphones will be so placed that every detail of the music will be picked up and transmitted to the recording mechanism, for preservation on the records. These recordings are expected to furnish invaluable study material for glee clubs that are being organized at a rapidly increasing rate.

And the bones are put on to boil,

That Thanksgiving's come and gone.

Beware the Cough or Cold That Hangs On

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Cremolone, an emollient cream that is pleasant to take. Cremolone is a new medical discovery with two-fold action: it soothes and breaks the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, Cremolone is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Cremolone contains, in addition to cream, other healing elements which soothe and break the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the cream goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Cremolone is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory distress, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (adv.)

FAIRY QUEEN'S BALL

THE Fairy Queen is going to give a ball tomorrow evening," said the Breeze Brothers, "and she wants you to come. It is to be a fancy dress ball, and costumes are to be flower costumes."

"Everyone must look like a flower." These were the messages the Breeze Brothers took around with them, and everyone sent back word to the Fairy Queen that the invitation was accepted with much pleasure.

The next evening everyone came and in the sky Mr. Moon wore his crisp, shape suit, which was one of his very best he considered.

Then, They All Danced! Such a Dance as It Was.

He said he couldn't dress like a flower very well as he had no flower costumes but he would do the best he could at the time.

And everyone admired Mr. Moon for the Fairy Queen was very fond of Mr. Moon's crescent shape.

The Fairies were all dressed like little Blues or Eyebrights. They wore costumes of blue, with four blue petals coming out from these costumes, while the center part was of white.

Old Mr. Giant came dressed in a costume to make him look like the Indian or Wild Tobacco Flower.

Witty Witch came dressed in the costume of the Cardinal Flower, and the bright scarlet of her costume was much admired.

The Elves wore costumes so that they looked like Black-Eyed Susans or Yellow Daisies. And they wore breeches which were very coarse and rough to show that Black-Eyed Susans had very coarse stems.

The Gnomes wore costumes so that they looked like Violets. Some looked like Yellow Violets and some like Long-Stemmed Purple ones.

Others looked like White Violets and some were like Little Purple Violets almost hidden under their leaves.

Then they all danced! Such a dance as it was. And so lovely a sight as it was to see all the Fairyland people dressed in their beautiful flower costumes.

They had a delicious woodland supper with Moss Ice Cream which the Fairy Queen had made herself.

And then, after supper was over and Mr. Moon had laughingly refused to eat anything saying that if he did he feared that he would have Moon indigestion, the Fairy Queen sang a song she had made up especially for the occasion.

But there was a lot of joking about Mr. Moon and his indigestion first. He was asked what Moon indigestion was, and he said that it was indigestion people had when they couldn't think of what they had eaten to give them indigestion and then saw the Moon and said the Moon must have given it to them.

He said he had never heard anyone say that, but he had to think of an answer so quickly to the Fairyland people that that was the best he could do upon such short notice!

But he said he was sure that if he ate he would have indigestion and then they'd have to send a hot water bottle up to the sky and a warm blanket to cover over him, and he would have to have to put them to all that trouble.

So he refused their kind offer of food.

Then came the Fairy Queen's song and it ended up with these lines which all joined in singing:

"We're dressed to look like flowers, Oh, happiness is ours!"

THE WHY of SUPERSTITIONS

By H. IRVING KING

MEETING A PIG

IT IS bad luck to meet a pig while on a journey; and if, on going visiting, you meet a pig on the way it is a sign that you will not be welcome when you arrive at your destination. These are superstitions—or rather a variation of the same superstition—found to be rather common in Canada and New England and perhaps existing in other localities. Also some fishermen object to meeting a pig when about to embark for the fishing grounds, and some old-fashioned sailors regard the hog as a bad omen, if they meet one just before sailing.

This idea that it is bad luck to encounter a hog at the beginning of any enterprise is a mild form of a similar superstition found among the northern nations of Europe, especially among the Scottish fishermen, among whom an intense horror of even the animal's name prevails.

That the hog was connected with moon-worship we know and one writer says in regard to the superstition under consideration, "All animals connected in folklore with the moon are diabolical, a relic of the antipathy of sun-worshippers to moon-worshippers." This antipathy can only have existed, however, among the Northern nations. The most civilized peoples of antiquity, we know, worshiped both the sun-god and the moon-goddess; conceiving a union instead of an antipathy between them. But among the Northern nations sun-worship was prominent; the traces of moon-worship comparatively few. The dwellers on the misty coasts of Scotland and Norway had not the same reason to worship the "source of moisture" as the Egyptians had and moon-worship, therefore, may have been considered highly heterodox. As the superstition in question is a Northern one, perhaps the explanation cited is correct.

Word's Meaning Changed

The word "sarcasmatic" originally meant a marriage ceremony, but is now applied to the union of a royal person with one of inferior rank, the children of which do not succeed to the rank of the first.

As Told by Irvin S. Cobb

THE LIGHT THAT FAILED

AN OLD colored man, who had been crippled in the railroad service, served for many years as a watchman at a grade crossing in the outskirts of a Kentucky town not far from where I formerly lived. By day he wielded a red flag and by night he swung a lantern. He was conscientious and wide-awake and proud of his position of responsibility and authority and for a long time no accident occurred to mar his perfect record.

Finally, though, one dark night a colored man from the country, driving home from town, steered his mules across the track just as the Memphis flyer came through and abolished him, along with his team and his wagon. His widow sued the railroad for damages. At the trial the chief witness for the defense was the old crossing watchman.

Dressed in his Sunday best Uncle Gabe stumped to the stand, took the oath to tell the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth. And then, under promptings from the attorney for his side, he proceeded to give testimony strongly in favor of the defendant corporation. He stated that he had seen the approaching train in due time, standing in the street, he had waved his lantern to and fro for a period of at least one minute. In spite of the warning, he said, the deceased had driven upon the rails just as the train whistled across the street.

Naturally, the attorney for the plaintiff put him to a severe cross-examination. Uncle Gabe answered every question readily and with evident honesty. He told just how he had held the lantern, how he swung and pointed it and so forth and so on. So convinced was the jury by his air of sincerity that, instead of giving a judgment for the full amount of damages asked, they awarded the widow only a few hundred dollars—a much smaller sum than the railroad had figured it must pay.

After court had adjourned the lawyer for the railroad sought out the old man and congratulated him upon his behavior as a witness.

"Gabe," he said, "you acquitted yourself splendidly. Weren't you at all nervous while on the stand?" "I certainly was, hon," replied Uncle Gabe. "I kept wondering what was going to happen to that wife goodness should be at me if that lantern was broken."

Venus "Bobbed"

At Mizpah, where Samuel once sat in judgment and which became the capital of Judah after the destruction of Jerusalem by Nebuchadnezzar in 586 B. C., a statue of the Babylonian Venus has been found. The female workman called her the "Queen of Heaven." She is represented as having a bird with a crown, or horns, in front.

Earliest Manuscripts

Illustrated manuscripts are those whose texts are highlighted and decorated by vignettes and elaborate illuminated initials, or in gold and silver. Fifteen centuries before Christ the papyrus rolls of the "Book of the Dead" were illuminated with brilliant colors and designs. Later, as written language developed, the important letters were illuminated.

Double Vision

Dr. James Taggart tells the story about Lord Aberdeen. The latter was walking along a street in Edinburgh when a ripsy fellow bumped into him. A policeman stopped the man, saying, "Do you know that you have run into the Marquis of Aberdeen and Tennyson?" "Oh Lord, on I as drunk as I that!" said the culprit. Knees Were Swollen

—He Found Relief

Gentlemen: I have not been able to get around only to creep for five years, until I got hold of Joint-Ease and I now can walk where I please. My knees were swollen and my legs all the time. Now the pain has left and the swollen legs are normal and I recommend Joint-Ease highly. I have used two tubes.

Truly yours, W. J. Roy, Morgantown, W. Va.

A tube costs but 60 cents at Dettick's Drug Store or any druggist anywhere.

President William T. Cosgrave declared there was no Irish conspiracy to overthrow the Irish Free State. He said she still loved Prince Carol of Rumania. Zizi Lambrino, his morganatic wife, sued him for 10,000,000 francs in recognition of their child. Major General Amos A. Fries demanded the firing of a Washington school teacher. Representative John T. Garner, of Texas, served notice that he would fight President Coolidge's plan for an income tax.

ANOTHER CHANGE IN PHILA. MANAGEMENT

Philadelphia, Nov. 19 (AP).—William J. Shettline, business manager of the Philadelphia National League baseball club has resigned. It became known today.

Shettline, associated with the club since its organization in 1883, has held positions ranging from office boy to president. His resignation was to have been officially announced within a few weeks. His leaving is the second important change brought about in the club's management since the closing of the season. Manager Arthur Fletcher having been supplanted by Stuffy McInnis.

RESTLESS GREECE

The Busy Harbor of Patras, Greece.

(Prepared by the National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.)

GREECE, which has shared honors recently with Spain as the home of Europe's latest revolution, has had a succession of such disturbances since the World War. This unrest has been ascribed by some historians to the long period under Turkish oppression, but even in classic days the Greek seemed ever ready with the sword and shield.

To separate the life of modern Greece from the splendors of its classic or Byzantine days is not easy, and the Greeks themselves would be the first to resent it. They, of a truth, deem themselves the direct descendants of the worthies of classic days, and certain it is that their life has shown a persistent continuity which warrants the claim.

Whether their land has been ruled by a Roman emperor, a Frankish duke, a Venetian baili or a Turkish pasha, the thread of Hellenic existence has remained unbroken. In the monasteries have been preserved their religion, their tongue, their traditions; mothers have taught their children the glories of the Greek heritage in defiance of the infidel interdiction, and today the Greek people stand forth, in character at least, exactly as they did in the days of yore, as Aristophanes pictured them, as St. Paul described them, and as every scholar has learned to regard them.

In many of its aspects Greek life remains unchanged from its classic features. Modern Athens, to be sure, is a brilliant capital, advancing its claim to be known as the Paris of the Levant. Less than a century ago it finally passed from Turkish possession, and it was then a handful of hovels huddled together beneath the Acropolis. Today it is a city of wide and gay streets, dotted with small parks and adorned with handsome public buildings, many of them the gifts of rich Greeks, who have delighted to spend upon the mother country the fortunes which they have gained abroad.

To such generosity Athens owes the noble group of buildings which comprises the university, the National library and the fine classic reproduction which houses the Academy of Science, and, above all, the noble stadium, built upon the foundations and along the old lines and ingeniously carrying in its fabric every fragment of the old structure that could be found.

Ruins of the Days of Glory.

In the midst of all this modernity stand the remnants of the golden days of Athens, sedulously preserved and open to inspection and study with a freedom nowhere equaled. The focus, of course, is the Acropolis, with its Parthenon, incomparable even in its ruins. Its cliffs and grottoes still the home of legend and fable.

Within a narrow circle all the phases of ancient Athenian life are represented. Under the shadow of the mighty rock stands the classic Temple of Theseus, best preserved of all the ancient monuments and serving a varied purpose throughout the centuries as pagan temple, Christian church and Turkish palace.

Only a few steps away rise the well-kept walls of the Sion of Hadrian, which, with other works of Latin origin, speak of that distant day when a Roman emperor ruled the violet-crowned city.

Of the early Christian era there are many dilapidated fragments upon the walls of nearly all the classic structures, and the first expressions of the architectural aspirations of our faith are to be found in the beautiful little Byzantine churches, the most striking of which is that of St. Theodore, set down in the midst of one of the great business streets of the city. Its foundations already sunken beneath the detritus of the centuries, yet scrupulously guarded against commercial encroachment.

Of Turkish days there are but few distinct traces of structural importance; but the bazaar, as typified by the Lane of the Little Red Shoon, the home of the cobblers, or Hephaestus street, the quarter of the copper-smiths, are far more oriental than either Hellenic or European.

In this land of changing allegiance the marks of the Venetian occupation, as elsewhere, were set deep and strong. Certain it is today, in its architecture at least, as much Italian as of their Venetian or Neapolitan; while Naxos, Patras and many of the island sanctuaries still make use of the battlemented fortresses erected by the Latin rulers.

Explorer Honored

Portuguese explorers of India have honored the memory of their great conquistador, Vasco da Gama, by the erection of an imposing monument in Nova Goa, or Panaji, as it is often called.

As of old, the Greeks swarm the seas. The Piræus is one of the busiest and most crowded of Mediterranean ports; it is indeed one of the important centers of transshipment for the East, and the Greek merchant marine has multiplied its fleet from year to year. The Corinthian canal, after many financial vicissitudes, now seems in the way of becoming each year a more and more useful route between the Ionian and the Aegean seas, and its sheer walls are eloquent of the persistence with which an ancient dream has been fostered and brought to realization.

Essentially a Town People.

The Greeks are essentially a town people—made so doubtless by the necessity, in Turkish days, of coming together in masses for self-defense. But, whatever the reason, one-tenth of the entire population is to be found in Athens and the Piræus.

The drain of emigration from the rural districts has been enormous. Indeed, in some villages of the Peloponnese there remain scarcely enough men to till the offices.

In one sense, however, the emigration has been of benefit to the country; for large sums of money are sent back each year, especially from America, to the families which have been left at home.

But, while Athens and a few of the larger towns have taken on the aspect of today, country life in Greece remains in most of its fundamentals as it has been for ages. Within two hours' drive of Athens one could see, a few years ago, peasants plowing their fields with crooked sticks, exactly as they probably did in the days of Homer.

The shepherd boys of today manage their flocks—and there are said to be more goats than Greeks in Greece—with a crook fashioned upon the same lines as that which Corydon carried. And in Thessaly one still finds in daily use the solid-wheeled cart that has come down without substantial change from the days of Jason.

The distaff remains the chief instrument in preparing wool for the hand looms on which are woven the coarse and shaggy stuffs worn by the peasants, and one rarely finds it absent from the busy fingers of the older dames who sit and work in the sun.

Greece is a land of much sunshine and life is followed much in the open. The family oven is invariably to be found in the courtyard, and it is heated with dried twigs brought from the country districts in huge loads upon the patient little donkeys, which vie with the goats in being the most useful members of the household.

Market Day at Megara. Market day, of course, brings all the community together and is generally an occasion of much gaiety, while the feast days, which are numerous, are literally observed. Fastings, too, is frequent and severe.

On feast days there is always dancing, the most famous to be seen at Megara during Easter week—a survival, and the only one, of the olden pan-Athenic pageants of classic times.

Megara prides itself on being a pure Hellenic community in the midst of the Albanian flood which once overran the Attic plains. It was once famous as a marriage mart during the Easter dancing season. This is no longer true, because, as the maidens sigh, so many of the men have gone off to America.

At Megara the native costume is seen at its best. It is rarely worn anywhere nowadays and has almost wholly disappeared from the cities. But for the E-vening or household troops, at the city barracks which the Greeks call the "big" palace, the fustanella would be almost as rare a sight in Athens as the classic garb, which is worn there only by American dancers.

It is not yet easy to go about in Greece. The railroad lines are meager, the roads are not good, and the hotels leave much to be desired. But the famous battle field where "mountains look on Marathon and Marathon looks on the sea" is easily accessible to Athens. So, too, Olympia, where archeologists have unearthed remnants of the great temple, with its incomparable Hermes, the masterpiece of Phidias and clearly the finest sculpture which has yet come from human hands, is a favorite shrine for lovers of the beautiful.

For the most accessible of all the great centers of classic life is Delphi, a fitting shrine for an oracle, with its marvelous and superb cliffs and its majestic hills looking out to the sea.

Piano Recital
A Musical Treat

With every hearing of Guy Maier and Leo Pattison in one of their two-piano recitals, the marvel of their unified personality—their perfect synchronism—grows quite as much as the marvel of their apparently perfect artistry. Thursday night's audience at the Kingston High School were all on tip-toe to give these two master musicians an enthusiastic welcome, and they seemed equally desirous of showing their pleasure at being in Kingston and played their entire program as though it was a special pleasure to delight and inspire their hearers. One doesn't talk about their technique, one enjoys it and the amazing way in which they make that very mechanical instrument, a piano, seem positively human.

First they played a group of three numbers. The Mozart Andante with five variations was like the song of a beautiful, clear, limpid stream flowing through forest, field, or rocky ground in sunlight, then by the pale light of the moon. It was exquisite. Even though it was the only two-piano number that Chopin ever wrote, and that in his youth, without any program one would know it must be a composition by Chopin, the unique musician, especially in the brilliant passages which were like high lights on pearls.

No contrast could be greater than the next number, "Dance-Macabre" by Saint-Saens, with its sinister coloring; its fierceness and tremendous climax, and then, when quite spent, its lovely closing melody.

In response to the hearty applause the artists played, "The Coronation Scene," from the Russian Opera, "Boris Godunov," arranged by Mr. Pattison, a marvelously realistic and colorful tone-picture.

Out into the open, into bracing mountain air, a clear night and stars, the musicians took their audience as they played the "Air with Variations," (Goldberg Variations) by Bach-Bachmanoff. Strong friendship, courage, faith, worship, something spiritual, Bach put into that air and variations, and Maier and Pattison passed it all on to their audience by their perfect playing of a perfect composer.

Mr. Maier has a charming way of adding to the enjoyment of the program by his touches of explanation. It was little wonder that he announced that they would add a number to the next group, for it was the only hope of bridging over the great distance between the lofty spirit of Bach, and Saint-Saens in a humorous mood. The modulating number, was a lovely, wistful, hazy Prelude by De Bussy—"Afternoon in Fall"—that fascinated the audience. Mr. Maier then told of Saint-Saens, by way of a joke, writing a sort of Musical Zoo, in which all the well-known animals were given a hearing, and in which he included "the pianists," who were having an awful time trying to play some exercises. Finally, coming to their senses, they abandoned their effort and gaily played bits from several well-known and older compositions, (Fossils) after which "Wild Horses," danced up and down then dashed away. The first numbers of this group were "The Lion's Grand March," "The Aquarium," and "The Cuckoo in Deep Woods," all different, all very entertaining.

Mr. Maier gave the following translation from the Russian, as somewhat descriptive of "Tears" by Rachmaninoff:

Tears of mankind, human tears falling eternally, early and late faster and faster they flow like a fierce flood of rain in the dull night time of autumn.

It was heart-aching, and so potent with world woe that the chorus from the instruments and the ever-falling tears seemed something more and blitzer than tragedy, as played by Maier and Pattison, and for a minute or two after the last note died into silence not a sound was heard in the auditorium; then the listeners burst into applause.

Then the artists changed life for their hearers, who floated or tripped or gaily whirled to the charming, graceful, fascinating music of "The Beautiful Blue Danube" Waltzes by Strauss-Chasins. Of course the audience would not let them go with that, so by request, they played "A Popular Song" arranged by Mr. Pattison, which helped one back to daily living after the altitudes of the evening's music, and as a second encore, the artists played with a lilt and song to help along the way, "A Waltz" by de Retzke. Maier and Pattison now belong to Kingston music lovers.

The next concert of the Ulster County Musical Association series will be given on December 16, by Mario Kurenko, soprano.

Really Happy Ending

S. G. writes in great dejection: "There is nothing more in life for me, now, since the shattering of my firm belief that movie serials never end. I have just witnessed the tenth and last installment of a thriller, and the denouement is, I think, worthy of note. The sister of the villain, who complicates the plot dreadfully by being the finest little woman in the world, rides up on her galloping steed to the scene of a bloody combat between the hero and the shameless rascal, but only our hero is visible, his head bloody but unbothered. "Where," pants she, "where is my brother?"

Our hero walks with bowed head to the edge of the cliff, and points to the ledge below where the villain lies crushed to a pulp. "Oh, well," says our little Pollyanna, "he was only my half-brother anyway."—Kansas City Times.

His First Prayer

Nathaniel Londermilk, Newton, N. C., said to be a good natured, though rather godless man, was picking tomatoes a recent day when he felt a stinging sensation in the calf of his leg, says Capper's Weekly. Looking down he saw a monstrous snake had bitten him. Rushing to the house, terrified, he asked his wife what to do. "The best thing you can do is to pray," said the good woman. Now, Nathaniel had never prayed, but he fell on his knees and this is the prayer he is said to have made:

"Oh Lord, this is Nathaniel Londermilk, of 571 Smyre street, Newton, N. C. I was in my garden a little while ago trying to gather a few tomatoes, and accidentally stepped on a big snake, and when I did the damned thing bit me in the leg. Amen."

Financial and Commercial

New York, Nov. 19 (AP).—Lopsided sporadic selling attacks against United States Steel common and General Motors, the stock market pointed upward today on a resumption of group buying in the sugar traffic equipment, tobacco and amusement shares.

Reports of a further slight recession in mill operations of the United States Steel Corporation were offset by the announcement that the American Sheet and Tin Plate Company, a subsidiary, had received tentative contracts for between 5,000,000 and 6,000,000 boxes of tin plate, value at around $30,000,000. Call money was in plentiful supply at the renewal rate of 4 1/2 per cent despite the calling of about $15,000,000 in loans before 1 p. m.

Baldwin was run up over five points to 141 1/2, the strength of this issue reviving the frequently denied rumors of a sale of its Philadelphia real estate. New peak prices for the year were recorded by nearly a score of issues, including Liggett and Meyers common and the "B" stock, American Sumatra Tobacco, Reynolds
 Tobacco "B", Texas Gulf Sulphur, Liquid Carbonic, Rock Island seven per cent preferred, Cuban-American Sugar preferred and Columbia Gas preferred, (new)

Standard Oil of New Jersey broke to a new low level for the year at 35.

Offer $50,000
 For Family Bible

Los Angeles, Nov. 19 (AP).—Fifty thousand dollars is offered for a family Bible said to contain the record of the births and deaths of the descendants of James Alexander Cowan, who came from Scotland to Hudson Falls, N. Y. The offer was made by Robert E. Cowan, his wife who is better known as B. M.
 Bower, fiction writer, and his brother, James Cowan of Mexico City, who are seeking to prove their claim to the millions left by William P. Cowan of Wheaton, Ill., who died in 1918.

The old Bible, which disappeared
 ten years ago on a South Dakota homestead, is being sought by Robert and James Cowan, who say they saw in their boyhood the written record that their father, James Alexander, and William C. father of William P.
 Cowan, were brothers.

William P. Cowan was at one time president of the Standard Oil Company of Illinois. He died violently intestate. Six claimants came forward as cousins and shared in the estate.

Popular Saturday Nights at "Y"

Commencing tomorrow evening the Kingston Y. Men's Club will run a series of six popular Saturday night entertainments in the gymnasium of the Y. M. C. A.

The program arranged for this Saturday evening will be quite interesting and well worthy of a large attendance.

The Albany volleyball team will come to Kingston to play a picked team of local Y. M. C. A. volleyball players and a fast game is assured.

Before the game the Student B. class will present an entertainment under direction of Physical Director Hinds consisting of drills, hockey, group games and other stunts. The boys are working hard to make their part of the program attractive.

A small admission will be charged and tickets can be obtained from any member of the Y's Men's Club or at the Y. M. C. A. Program will commence at 8:00 o'clock. Entrance to the gymnasium is through the main lobby of the Y. M. C. A.

Accusers

It was on charges involving crimes against Ruth Bamford Reed (top) and Gladys Bamford Rubel that "King" Benjamin Purnell, leader of the House of David cult at Benton Harbor, Mich., was arrested.

All Others Telegraph

There is a little gate opening into a miniature back yard garden just off Seventh Avenue near Perry Street, the Village. Artists sit within at tables on hot afternoons and night. The gate is painted a lurid yellow, one of the official colors of the Village. There is a bell alongside.
Two handbills once visited the premises. Sightseers have been in the habit of walking in unannounced. Now a sign has appeared on the outside of the gate. It reads:
Friends—Ring once.
Enemies—Ring three times.
Bandits—Please phone—New York World.

Garibaldi

This is the first photograph to reach America of Ricciotti Garibaldi, descendant of the famous Italian liberator. This picture was taken while Garibaldi was in care of Paris police after it was alleged he had served the Italian Government as an agent provocateur in France.

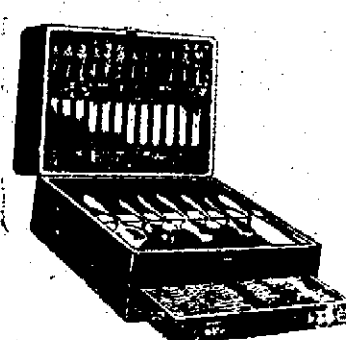

Grows in Wisdom

A very young girl is usually grateful for even the smallest gift, points out Thyrta Sauter Winslow in an article in Liberty, but as she grows older, and finds that men want to be rewarded for their presents, she learns "not only to look a gift horse in the mouth, but to count his teeth and examine his mane and tail as well."

Acts Alone Count

One secret act of self-denial, one sacrifice of desire to duty, is worth more than all the good thoughts, warm feelings, passionate prayers, in which idle people indulge themselves. —Cardinal Newman.

FOR THAT DINNER—On THANKSGIVING

You will want everything to look "just right." Nothing brightens up the table more cheerfully than lustrous gleaming silver. If you are short just a piece or two drop in and see us and we will do our best to help you complete your set, and by the way, we have a special sale on now, of a very attractive pattern in silver which will be a delightful feast to the eyes of every guest.

Today and Tomorrow

SCINTILLATIN' - SYNCOPATIN' - SENSATION

Syncopating Sue—she was pretty as a balled with song-hit talent, and a flat-note future—until—oh, make a date with yourself to see it.

SHE TAUGHT CUPID THE CHARLESTON—BROADWAY THE BLUES—AND FILMDOM HOW TO MAKE A GREAT PICTURE.

Do you want to LAUGH? Laugh till the tears run down your cheeks? Then come and see

—“THE MILLIONAIRES”—

With GEORGE SIDNEY, VERA GORDON, NAT CARR and LOUISE FAZENDA.

MONDAY, TUESDAY and WEDNESDAY.

Archeological Treasures

Tombs definitely assigned to the Neolithic period, marking the transition from the Stone to the early Bronze age, have been discovered in recent archeological investigations in Palestine, by Prof. William Bode of the Pacific School of Religion. Several crania and one skeleton incased in paraffin are en route to Berkeley, Calif. for scientific study. Doctor Bode also uncovered a well-modeled head of an Astarte or Babylonian Venus whose culture strikingly resembles the present feminine hair cut.

Barred "Castles in Spain"

The idiom "Castles in Spain," current in England in the Fifteenth century, continued in use until 1558 or thereabouts, but with the accession of Queen Elizabeth, and the public sentiment in England being anti-Spanish, it was thrown into the discard, and "castles above the skies," "castles in the air," were used as substitutes.
